Most people come to Bailey Wick Farm Wedding & Event Venue for the barn, but the property also includes a pavilion, which the venue features alongside the barn in its photo galleries. Having a second covered structure on the same property gives couples and event hosts in the Roanoke Valley more ways to plan their day.

A pavilion can play several roles at a wedding. It might host a cocktail hour while the barn is turned over for dinner, shelter a lawn games area for younger guests, or serve as a covered ceremony spot if the forecast is uncertain. Because it sits on the same farm in Fincastle, guests can move between spaces on foot.

The pavilion also suits smaller events that do not need the full barn. Families have used the farm for baby showers, bridal showers and reunions, and an open-air structure with a view toward the Blue Ridge Mountains can be a lovely setting for a casual afternoon celebration. Ask the family how the pavilion and barn can be combined or used separately for your event.
