What a Grapple Truck Can Remove

Grapple trucks are especially useful for tree debris, brush piles, cut limbs, logs, palm material, storm cleanup, and vegetation produced by land clearing. They can also support contractors, tree companies, property managers, and homeowners who need a large pile removed from a safe loading area.

Not every type of waste belongs in the same load. Dirt, concrete, roofing, hazardous materials, household garbage, and mixed construction debris may require different handling or disposal arrangements. Provide an accurate description before scheduling so the right truck and disposal plan can be selected.

Why Grapple Loading Is Efficient

A hydraulic grapple can lift material that would otherwise require several workers and repeated hand loading. This makes it valuable after tree removal, lot clearing, hurricane cleanup, and major trimming projects. The truck can often load from a driveway edge, roadside staging area, or open section of the property when overhead clearance and ground conditions allow.

Preparing Your Debris Pile

- Place the pile where the truck can safely reach it.
- Keep debris away from utility lines, mailboxes, fences, and parked vehicles.
- Do not mix household trash or prohibited material into vegetation piles.
- Tell the dispatcher about narrow roads, gates, soft ground, or low branches.
- Estimate the pile length, width, height, and largest log diameter.
