Lively melody is able to invigorate and motivate. Slow, soft sound can calm and soothe. The secret is to pick sound that matches the desired atmosphere and vitality of each instant.

The Factors

Kollysphere suggests contemplating the subsequent factors when choosing background music for your gathering.

The Type of Event

The category of gathering should dictate the type of music you choose. A corporate conference requires professional, unobtrusive background music—think light jazz, instrumental renditions of popular tunes, or ambient electronic melody. A celebratory meal could require more elegant, sophisticated music—think about classical music, swing, or smooth jazz. A product launch could require more energetic, modern music—consider lively electronic, indie pop, or present-day hits.

The Arc of the Event

The Technical Side

Volume Control

Volume is critical. Background music needs to be exactly that—backdrop. It ought to be audible but not overpowering. Attendees ought to be able to converse without elevating their voices. Beyond the Radio Kollysphere recommends crafting a bespoke playlist rather than just putting on the radio or a generic streaming station.
