An urgent care doctor can help with many illnesses and minor injuries, but some symptoms need an emergency room. Knowing where to go saves time and supports safer health decisions.

Urgent Care or Emergency Room?

University of Utah Health explains in ER vs. Urgent Care: Where Should I Go? that urgent care handles lower-acuity complaints, while crushing chest pain warrants an emergency room.

Urgent care, often a walk-in clinic, also suits fever, flu-like symptoms, minor cuts, Click here for more sprains, and simple fractures. Call 911 or go to an emergency room for severe shortness of breath, sudden severe pain, major trauma, or signs of stroke.

Choosing a Miramar Urgent Care Doctor

Check the provider's credentials, current hours, insurance, and whether the clinic treats children or offers pediatric care. Ask about wait times and how the care team handles follow-up.

Bring or ask about:

- Medicines, allergies, and medical history.
- The clinician's license and scope.
- Same-day sick care and occupational medicine services.
- When to get emergency care.
